What is it?

Acriflavine lotion is a topical antiseptic solution yellow or orange in colour, mainly used for minor wounds, burns, and infected skin. Although used in dilution (0.1%) for medical purposes, this agent has been documented to produce potential skin itchiness, irritation or burning sensation upon contact.

Acriflavine's chief value is its remarkable power to stimulate epithelial growth on healthy granulating surfaces

Acriflavine is used in applications for dual fluorescence analysis of cellular DNA and protein simultaneously.

Acriflavine Inhibits Acquired Drug Resistance by Blocking the Epithelial-to-Mesenchymal Transition and the Unfolded Protein Response

Applications

Acriflavine Hydrochloride is a fluorescent dye, used as a topical contrast agent. It mainly stains nuclei and is applied to tissues before microscopy. For safe and easy transportation, this drug is packed in moisture proof materials

Synthesis

Oligo(acriflavine) was synthesized via chemical oxidative polycondensation by H₂O₂ (30%) as the oxidant at an optimum reaction temperature of 110 °C without use of an additional external template.
