How do you test for honey?

Here's how to do
the water test:

Fill a glass with water.
Add one tablespoon of honey
into the glass.
Adulterated or artificial honey
will dissolve in water and you will see it around the glass.

European imports rising in volume

Europe is the second largest global producer of honey. However, it is not self-sufficient and is dependent on honey imports from other countries. In fact, around 40% of Europe's consumption needs are met through honey imports.

The largest supplier of honey to the European market is China, with imports amounting to more than 98,000 tonnes. Imports from China represent 29% of total honey imports directed to Europe. Chinese honey supplies are stable and sufficient, while the prices for honey are low because of Low Labour costs.

Pre-market approval for honey

Residue Monitoring Plan (RMP) must be in Place
The RMP guarantees that the honey imported does not contain any prohibited residues or veterinary drugs, such as chloramphenicol.

Food safety – traceability, hygiene and control

To guarantee food safety and to allow appropriate action in cases of unsafe food, your food product must be traceable throughout the entire supply chain. Each batch of honey must be accompanied by a health certificate signed and stamped by a veterinary officer authorized by the relevant authorities of the exporting country.

Core requirements for organic beekeeping are as follows:

- Beehives must be positioned in an area with a radius of 3 km, which is free of contamination by chemicals (e.g. from an industrial complex, airport or main road).
- Crops on which the bees feed must not have been chemically treated.
- Artificial feed must carry organic certification.
- Diseases must not be treated with veterinary medicines, only with approved organic substances.
- Bees must not be stupefied while the honey is harvested.
- The hives should be made of natural materials

About 25% of the honey consumed is used as an ingredient in food products. Although honey is not an innovative ingredient in itself, food and drink manufacturers still innovate with honey as an ingredient in products such as salty-sweet snacks, ready-to-drink tea and cereals. In recent years, honey has also become trendy as an addition to specialty drinks, flavored spirits and distilled beverages.

More testing to counter honey laundering

Honey laundering refers to the re-labelling of honey from one origin to another, with the aim to improve the perceived quality by honey buyers. Sometimes honey exporters in countries which are not on the ‘third country list’ or which have a bad reputation cooperate with international traders to ‘launder’ honey.

In 2011, Chinese honey was shipped to Thailand and India and then re-labelled before it entered Europe and the US. Although China is on the ‘third country list’, the country has a bad reputation and many European importers avoid Chinese honey.

Monofloral honeys

Monofloral varieties such as acacia, clover, fir and pine are gaining popularity in the leading honey markets. Consumption of these honeys and other monofloral honeys is increasing at annual rates of 5-15% and is expected to grow further compared to blended honeys.

A screenshot of a web browser displaying the National Honey Board website. The browser's address bar shows the URL 'honey.com/honey-industry/statistics/international-bulk-prices'. The website's header features the National Honey Board logo and navigation links for 'INDUSTRY HOME', 'STATISTICS', 'RESEARCH', 'REGULATION', and 'REPORTING'. Below the header, a secondary navigation bar highlights 'INTERNATIONAL BULK PRICES' among other options like 'STATISTICS', 'RETAIL HONEY PRICES', and 'WHOLESALE HONEY PRICES'. The main content area has a large heading 'INTERNATIONAL BULK PRICES' followed by a red text notice: 'Due to discrepancies in government data, the international bulk prices are currently being audited. Please check back.' Below this, a section titled 'International Bulk Prices' provides a source note: 'Total average bulk prices per pound of honey imported from four countries. Source: U.S. Department of Commerce, as reported monthly in the USDA National Honey Report using c.i.f. import value and therefore excluding U.S. import duties.' At the bottom of the page, a table is partially visible with columns for the years 2018 and the months JAN, FEB, MAR, APR, MAY, JUN, JUL, AUG, SEP, OCT, NOV, and DEC. The Windows taskbar at the bottom shows the search bar and various application icons, with the system clock indicating 21:03 on 24-09-2019.
